

ON MEDICAL EDUCATION, FROM A HOUSE SURGEON'S LENS

A conversation with Dr. Maanas Jain.

The story of Quintubate.

Dr. Sidharth Narayanan · House Surgeon, GMC Kozhikode

MBBS is the foundation of every doctor's career. Right now, it feels undervalued.

This series is about bringing that value back, and about what the foundation can lead to.

This one sits between the series and People of Healthcare: a doctor who set out to build.

Dr. Maanas Jain

Founder, Quintubate Pvt Ltd

MBBS, AIIMS Jodhpur

Internal Medicine, Rutgers University, USA

Source: Dr. Jain’s Instagram profile (@quintubate).

Before starting residency, he set out to build Quintubate.

A laryngoscope costs ₹1,000 to 2,000. A video-laryngoscope costs lakhs.

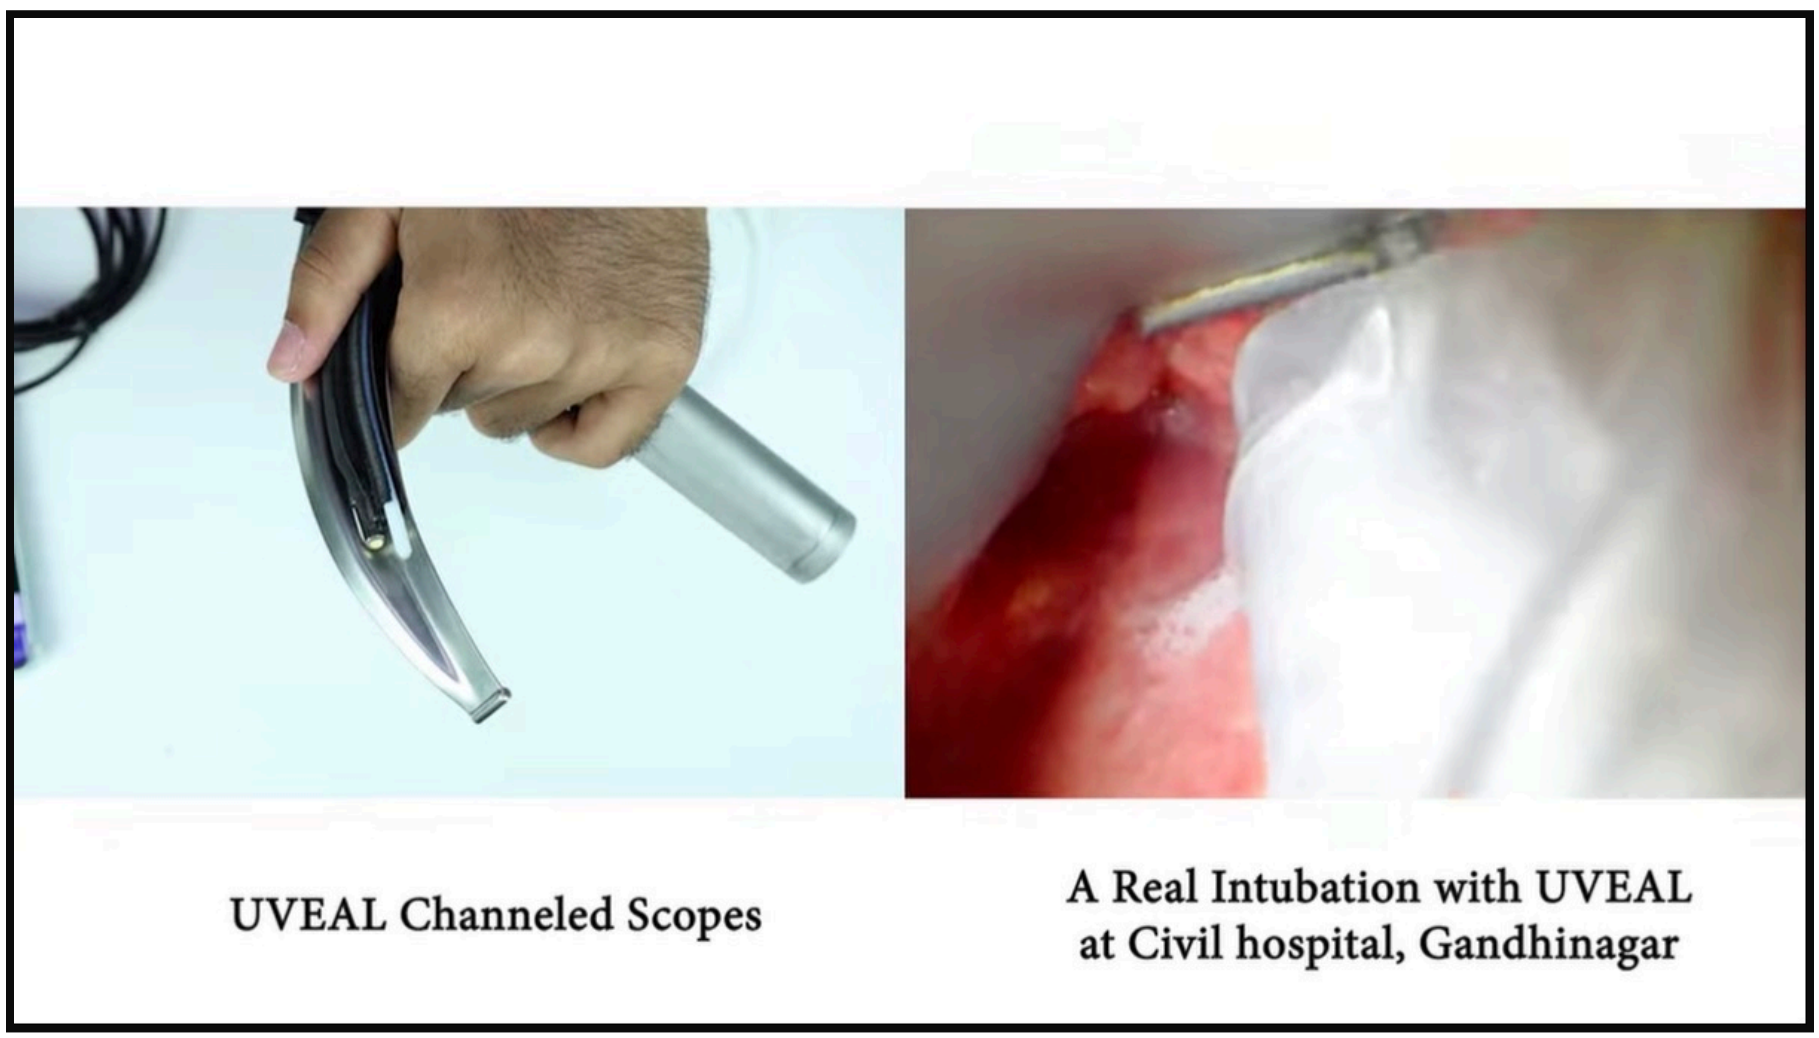

Source: figures as shown in Dr. Jain’s own video. ₹2,00,000 to ₹3,00,000 for a video-laryngoscope.

UVEAL: turning the laryngoscope a hospital already has into a video-laryngoscope.

A universal video-enabling attachment that sends the view to a smartphone.

Source: quintubate.com. The company describes UVEAL as smartphone-powered, compatible with existing laryngoscopes, and starting under ₹10,000; the video-laryngoscope comparison is the company’s own. The device is described by the company as CDSCO certified.

A real intubation, at a government hospital.

UVEAL Channeled Scopes

A Real Intubation with UVEAL at Civil hospital, Gandhinagar

Source: Dr. Jain’s video, captioned “A real intubation with UVEAL at Civil Hospital, Gandhinagar”.

I asked him how a medical student starts building.

The conversation.

I ASKED

What did you see in practice that made you want to build this?

DR. JAIN

[DRAFT: add his answer from your conversation, verbatim or lightly edited. Nothing is quoted until he approves.]

I ASKED

What stopped you, and what helped you start?

DR. JAIN

[DRAFT: add his answer from your conversation, verbatim or lightly edited. Nothing is quoted until he approves.]

I ASKED

What would you tell a student who has a problem and no idea where to begin?

DR. JAIN

[DRAFT: add his answer from your conversation, verbatim or lightly edited. Nothing is quoted until he approves.]

Some doctors don’t wait. They build.

I am connecting with 50 healthcare and MedTech leaders and builders in Kerala before 2026 ends, through People of Healthcare.

KNOW SOMEONE BUILDING IN HEALTHCARE?

medinn.in/people-of-healthcare